Podcast Script — The Age of Adaline

Theme: Identity, Time, and Human Change (≈8 minutes)

INTRODUCTION

Student 1:
Hello everyone, and welcome back to our podcast! Today we're discussing The Age of Adaline, a movie that mixes romance, fantasy, and deeper ideas about identity and time.

Student 2:
Yes, and honestly, when I first watched it, I thought it would just be a romantic film. But it became much more emotional and philosophical than I expected.

Student 3:
Exactly. The movie came out in 2015 and stars Blake Lively as Adaline Bowman, a woman who mysteriously stops aging after an accident.

Student 1:
Imagine staying 29 years old forever. At first that sounds amazing, right?

Student 2:
Honestly, yes! No wrinkles, no aging, eternal youth…

Student 3:
But the film quickly shows the negative side of that situation.

PART 1 — THE STORY AND ADALINE'S LIFE

Student 1:
So basically, Adaline cannot live a normal life because people would eventually notice that she never changes.

Student 2:
And because of that, she constantly changes her identity, moves to different cities, and avoids getting too close to people.

Student 3:
What I found sad is that she can never truly relax or build a stable life.

Student 1:
Yes, she's always hiding. Even simple things like friendships become dangerous for her.

Student 2:
And the hardest part is probably watching everyone around her grow old while she stays the same.

Student 3:
Especially with her daughter. Imagine your daughter looking older than you.

Student 1:
That part really shows how unnatural her situation is.

Student 2:
It also explains why Adaline becomes emotionally distant. She avoids relationships because she knows they won't last normally.

PART 2 — TIME AND IDENTITY

Student 3:
One thing I really liked about the movie is how it talks about time.

Student 1:
Yeah, because usually time changes everyone physically and emotionally.

Student 2:
But with Adaline, only part of that changes. Physically, she stays young forever.

Student 3:
Emotionally, though, she keeps evolving. She gains experience, memories, fears, and emotional scars.

Student 1:
That creates an interesting contrast: she looks young, but mentally she has lived through decades.

Student 2:
So the movie kind of asks: what really defines a person? Their appearance or their experiences?

Student 3:
For me, the answer is clearly experience. Adaline's personality changes even if her face doesn't.

Student 1:
I agree. There's actually a strong idea in the movie:
"In The Age of Adaline, time does not change Adaline's appearance, but love changes her identity."

Student 2:
That’s true because emotionally she changes a lot throughout the story.

PART 3 — ELLIS AND HUMAN CONNECTION

Student 3:
Things start changing when Adaline meets Ellis.

Student 1:
And at first, she tries to keep her distance like she always does.

Student 2:
Because she’s afraid. She’s spent years protecting herself emotionally.

Student 3:
But Ellis brings energy and warmth into her life again.

Student 1:
I think he represents normal life — something Adaline stopped allowing herself to have.

Student 2:
Exactly. Through him, she starts trusting people again and imagining a future instead of constantly running away.

Student 3:
And that’s important because the movie shows that humans need emotional connection.

Student 1:
Even someone who never ages still needs love, friendship, and stability.

Student 2:
Actually, Adaline suffers more from loneliness than from immortality itself.

Student 3:
Yes! The emotional isolation hurts her more than the physical condition.

PART 4 — IS ETERNAL YOUTH REALLY PERFECT?

Student 1:
So let’s talk about the big question: would eternal youth actually be a good thing?

Student 2:
Before watching the movie, I probably would've said yes.

Student 3:
Same. It sounds ideal at first.

Student 1:
But the film makes eternal youth feel more like a burden.

Student 2:
Because life gets meaning through change, memories, and growing with other people.

Student 3:
Exactly. Without change, Adaline's life becomes repetitive and emotionally empty.

Student 1:
And she can never fully belong anywhere.

Student 2:
So the movie suggests that aging is actually part of being human.

Student 3:
Which is interesting because society usually treats aging as something negative.

Student 1:
But here, change and aging become connected to emotional growth.

CONCLUSION

Student 2:
So overall, The Age of Adaline is much more than a simple romance movie.

Student 3:
It explores identity, loneliness, time, and emotional transformation.

Student 1:
And it reminds us that people are shaped more by experiences and relationships than by appearance.

Student 2:
Even though Adaline never changes physically, emotionally she changes constantly.

Student 3:
And maybe that’s the main message of the film: being human is not about staying young forever, but about growing through life and connections with others.

Student 1:
Thank you everyone for listening to our podcast!

Student 2:
We hope you enjoyed the discussion.

Student 3:
See you next time!

All:
Goodbye!
